Location

The romantic fishing village of l'Escala is beautifully situated in the south of the Gulf of Roses, approximately 40 kilometers from Girona and around 120 kilometers from Barcelona. The surrounding landscape enchants with its pine-covered hills, charming and secluded coves, and long, gently curving beaches. In l'Escala, visitors can enjoy three lovely sandy beaches: the sheltered beach in Montgo Bay, the lively town beach of Riells, and the extensive, several-kilometer-long beach stretching from l'Escala to Sant Pere Pescador. These beaches are particularly family-friendly and perfect for a relaxing day by the sea.

In addition to its picturesque old town, l'Escala also boasts a modern center, Riells, with its shopping street along the seafront promenade. Here, visitors will find a variety of everyday shops, including bakeries, butchers, and pharmacies, all offering a wide range of products. The climate in l'Escala is pleasantly mild, with the famous Tramuntana wind providing a gentle breeze.

History enthusiasts should not miss the nearby Greek-Roman ruins of the ancient city of Empúries, located just about 2 kilometers away. These excavations, which began around 1900 and continue to this day, offer fascinating insights into the past. To the south of l'Escala rise the Cala Montgo and the impressive Montgo Mountain. From this vantage point, visitors can enjoy a breathtaking panoramic view over the Gulf of Roses all the way to the nearby Pyrenees, highlighting the beauty of the region in an extraordinary way..
